

I'm dismayed to hear that the federal government wants to override the Wisconsin no-call list policy. The citizens of Wisconsin has made it clear that it does not want to be bothered at home. We would like the federal government to respect Wisconsin's choices in this matter. We are already bombarded daily with advertisements daily through the U.S. mail, email, internet pop-ups and flashing ads, billboards, TV, radio, flyers, and there are even ads in the restrooms at many restaurants. When I am at home, I DO NOT wish to be bothered with calls. The other day I agreed to a phone survey.....it took close to 20 minutes. Next time I'm saying no. They were taking advantage of my time.

Again, please, reconsider over-riding our state's no-call policy.

thanks,
Diane Busch
